

2012 MyGame Design Competition

Ever dreamt of designing your own computer mini-game? To inspire originality and creativity amongst youngsters, Business Software Alliance (BSA), Intellectual Property Department (IPD) and Customs and Excise Department (C&ED) have jointly launched the "2012 MyGame Design Competition". If you or your team can come up with a creative, funny and user-friendly gameplay, we will help to publish your gameplay as a computer mini-game!

A gameplay is a way in which players interact within a game. To assist you in designing a gameplay for your own mini-game, we will host 2 workshops in September for you to learn the tricks of developing a gameplay. To enter the competition, you (individual or team) will need to submit your gameplay on or before October 15, 2012. If your gameplay has a storyline that relates to the respect for intellectual property rights, it will increase your chances of winning the competition. Finalists of this competition will receive book coupons and the winner(s) will be notified in October. If you have aspirations to develop your own mini-game, don't miss this golden opportunity!
